Life history strategies of reef corals

Coral community reproductive patterns: Red Sea versus the Great Barrier Reef Yechiam Shlesinger & Yossi Loya (1985). Science (1985)

In contrast to many corals of the Great Barrier Reef, Australia, which are synchronous multispecific spawners, the abundant coral species in the northern Red Sea, Israel, exhibit temporal reproductive isolation. Spawning periods of the most abundant coral species occurred in different seasons, different months, or different lunar phases within the same month.

Global climate changes and its effect on biodiversity of coral reef communities

WORLD BANK/ UNESCO Project on the consequences of Coral Bleaching in the Great Barrier Reef (Australia), Zanzibar, Philippines & Mexico
(bleaching working group <http://www.gefcoral.org/>)

The Bleaching Working Group (BWG) has set established permanent study sites in Zanzibar, Puerto Morelos and Heron Island. At these sites, researchers are exploring the population dynamics under natural and perturbed conditions, as well as spatial patterns in population size frequency distributions and temporal changes of the populations in and out of bleaching events. Work within this research area also aims to resolve the potential impacts of changes in coral health on the many other species that are dependent on coral reefs for food and shelter.

Conservation Ecology of Coral-Reefs

The coral reefs of Eilat: Past, present and future

Deterioration in water quality due to eutrophication adversely affects coral reef community structure by promoting algal growth and turbidity, reducing light necessary for coral growth, adversely affects coral reproduction and has also been associated with increased bioerosion and epizootics. During the last 10 years, the yield of the fish farm industry in Eilat has grown exponentially from 300 tons/yr in 1994 to 2700 tons/yr in 2005. Cultured fish fed by 4500 tons/year “fish pellets” result in nutrient pollution (eutrophication), of the water column by 300 tons of Nitrogen and 50 tons of Phosphate annually.

Repetitive sex change in Fungiid species

In this study, we describe for the first time sex change occurring in corals. This includes a novel mode of repetitive sex change, which resembles that found in plants that display labile sexuality in response to environmental and/or energetic constraints. We suggest that resource partitioning in sex-allocation constitutes a flexible response of sex changing fungiid corals to local environmental conditions, and that their bidirectional sex shift reflects energy constraints on female reproduction. We discuss some intriguing analogies between the studied corals to sexually labile plants and posit that sex change in fungiid individuals enhances their fitness in a similar way to that which occurs in those plants. The novel finding of sex change in scleractinian corals reinforces the important role of reproductive plasticity in determining the evolutionary success of the Phylum Cnidaria

Mesophotic Coral Ecosystems (MCEs)

Mesophotic coral ecosystems (MCEs) are unique tropical and subtropical ecosystems characterized as light-dependent reef communities typically found at depths ranging from 30-40 m and extending to over 150 m in clear waters. This book provides the first comprehensive synthesis of the state of knowledge about MCEs worldwide. It also highlights how much we still have to learn. We invited authors to submit manuscripts focused on identified topics, with the co-authors of their choosing. Each manuscript underwent technical review by scientific and management experts to ensure its scientific integrity. The peer-review process consisted of over 200 individual reviews that were used by the authors to improve their manuscripts.
